THANK BOARD FOR RENOVIZE SUPPORT

The members of the City Council met in regular session last Monday evening to carry out the usual routine of business for our city. In the absenec of City Clerk B. C. Ross, who is enjoying a vacation, the chairman of the board appointed Councilman H. Sundermann to act as temporary city clerk.

The San Mateo County Renovize committee sent a communiaction to the City Counci, expressing their sincere appreciation for the support and action taken by the Daly City Council in the Renovize movement.

In a communication received from Old Glory Post No. 2044, Veterans of Foreign Wars, the desire was expressed to erect at each of the two city limits the Cross of Malta, the insignia of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. They further explained that these signs are being made at considerable expense, and will be a valuable asset to the city as an advertising medium. Permission was granted, with the provision that they consult the superintendent of streets in placing the signs.

A communication from the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company, asking permission to open Hillside boulevard for a distance of approximately 477 feet, stating that this work will be necessary due to the realignment and widening of Mission street at Hillside boulevard to meet the lower grade that will exist when the Mission street widening is completed, was laid over for two weeks.

The League of California Municipalities communicated with the board, calling attention to the coming convention of the League, which will be held in Santa Cruz, September 18-21. In another of the League's communications to the board, they desired to correct a popular misunderstanding regarding city or state employes conforming to the National Industrial Recovery Act. The official ruling at Washington is that the National Industrial Recovery Act campaign is not intended to include either city or state employes.

Under Senate Bill No. 1042, Section 8, of the Workmen's Compensation, insurance and safety laws was amended, effective August 21, 1933. This new law makes it compulsory for cities to carry compensation insurance on all active volunteer firemen, but does not affect Daly City, as this insurance has been carried on Daly City firemen for several years.

A resolution was adopted by the Council calling attention to the fact that reports show Daly City workmen not getting their share of work on the jail construction.

JEFFERSON HIGH NUMBER INCREASE

On Monday morning last the parents of Jefferson Union high school district began their vacation. High school opened for the new term, and the youngsters of the family returned to school. The task of looking after Tom and Dick and Mary was turned over to the teachers, and dad and mother gave a sigh of relief.

The previous days had been spent in shopping. Son needed a new sweater or a new pair of cords or shoes, and daughter needed a dress and other things. Mother was kept busy getting everything fixed up, and used up a lot of time and patience and energy. Dad, as usual, just paid the bills. But in lots of cases that, too, was hard work, especially where dad did not have a steady job.

The new term at Jefferson High opened with the largest enrollment in the history of the school. Three hundred and thirty-two upper-class men signed the roll, and one hundred and two freshmen, making a total of four hundred and thirty-four. Before the end of this month this number will be increased by the enrollment of new students from other districts and by the return of others who are still on their vacation.

In commenting on the large enrollment, Principal James Ferguson said it is evident that the district is growing in population and that the parents believe in giving their children an education. The addition to the new high school building came none too soon, he said.

The new rooms were assigned to the History and English and Science departments, with Miss Torello, Miss Staib, Mr. Gray and Mr. Saiz as teachers. The little assembly hall, or little theater, as some of the students call it, which consists of two rooms that can be thrown into one, will be used on occasions when more than one class is called together for a special purpose. This room is specially suited for public speaking and

LEGION APPROVES RENOVIZE PLAN

Daly City Post No. 410, American Legion, held its regular meeting Wednesday evening, August 9. Comrade Burns spoke on the San Mateo county Renovize campaign. Comrade Cornell was appointed chairman and has started active work to bring Daly City up to its quota. The Renovize campaign is in line with the Legion's community betterment and unemployment program. We urge every one in Daly City to support this program. The Legionnaires plan to make a thorough canvass of the city soon.

Daly City Post No. 410 unanimously sponsors President Roosevelt's N. R. A. campaign to bring back Prosperity.

A joint meeting will be held with Vimy Ridge Post No. 411 on our next regular meeting night, Wednesday, August 23, at Legion Hall, 474 San Diego avenue. Be sure to be there, as the delegates will give their reports of the Pasadena convention.

Don't forget social night, Saturday, August 26. "Doc" and his hay-wire orchestra will be there. Comrade Cornell promises a good time.

The Post and Unit will hold a joint whist in Legion Hall, Tuesday evening, August 29, at 8:30.

The San Mateo County Council will meet in Daly City, Friday night, September 1. All Legionnaires are invited to attend the Council meeting.

Comrades of the late Past National Commander O. L. Bodenhamer have started a fund to erect a memorial to him in his home town, El Dorado, Arkansas. According to word received by Department Adjutant James K. Fisk, no effort will be made to solicit funds, but contributions will be welcomed from friends of the late Commander, and may be sent to Deparment Adjutant R. W. Sisson, Little Rock, Arkansas. The memorial will be something of usefulness to humanity.

Comrades R. L. Crane, Ed. Trier, Cleo Miller, Harry Andersen and W. A. Steffan have been in Pasadena this week, as delegates, attending the State Department convention of the American Legion. L. M. H.

MISCELLANEOUS SHOWER FOR PROSPECTIVE BRIDE

Miss Henrietta McKeown, who will become the bride of Mr. Hal Moral in the near future, was honored at a miscellaneous shower given by Mrs. Rosa Saccone and Miss Susan McKeown on Saturday evening, August 5, at the home of Mrs. Saccone in San Francisco.

After a very pleasant evening, refreshments were served in the dining room, which was artistically decorated in pastel shades.

Those who were assembled to honor Miss Henrietta were: Mesdames F. J. McKeown, E. Berrigan, A. Bauer, G. Oakley, Mary Kahrau, Louise Moral, Rosa Saccone, Misses Margaret Twesten, Agnes Burke, Veronica Berrigan, Mildred Ross, Marie Rademann, Oriel Fischer, Ann McGovern, Emma Hintermann, Ita Berrigan, Catherine McKeown, Cecilia Nelsson, Susan McKeown.

PARENTS TO BE THE GUESTS OF JEFFERSON HIGH P. T. A.

Jefferson Union high school will be inspected by the parents of new students as special guests of the Parent-Teachers' Association next Tuesday evening, August 22. Special invitations are being sent to these parents. Other patrons of the district are expected to attend.

Under the leadership of Mrs. Truman Bentley the Parent-Teacher group is planning an extensive program for the school year. Chairmen have been selected for several of the committees and their names will be announced at an early date.

Regular monthly sessions are to be held on the third Tuesday of each month with the exception of December. The Little Tehater, located in the new addition, which was occupied this week for the first time, will be the scene of these interesting gatherings.

SCHOOL TAX RATE CUT IN SAN MATEO COUNTY

Sixteen of San Mateo county's 38 school districts will have no property taxes this year, it was revealed by Miss Pansy Jewett Abbott, county superintendent of schools. These districts have cash balances on hand which must be used up this year, according to the new state law.

A QUICK WAY TO STOP BLACKMAIL

In the nation-wide war now being waged against racketeers, the blackmailer should not be overlooked. The method to be used in exterminating the collector of tribute from our civilized communities is a simple one—hail the malefactor into court, present conclusive evidence of his low cunning, and whisk him off to the abiding place of criminals, where he belongs.

The great city of New York has shown the possibility of ridding society of the scum that thrives on threats of exposure or danger. The law in this state is explicit, as in New York, and a few convictions would soon drive the extortionists to cover, never to emerge in the light of day.

It must be that Californians are made of as strong fibre as the people on the Atlantic edge of the continent, and will not submit any longer to the demands of the blackmailers, no matter in what respectable guise they may go about in our midst.

After a jury in New York returned a verdict of guilty in the case of a woman charged with attempting to blackmail Bruce Barton, well known author, publicist, and advertising executive, Judge Joseph E. Corrigan, presiding in the court of General Sessions, said:

"I am told there has not been a conviction for blackmail in New York for ten years, and I hope your verdict will have a strong tendency to prevent that crime from being as common in the future as it has been in the past."

The woman in the Barton case—Mrs. Frances W. King—was tried on the charge of seeking to extort $50,000 from Mr. Barton and testimony brought out that on a previous occasion Mr. Barton had paid $25,000 in consequence of a suit for alienation of affections instituted by Mrs. King's husband.

The press in various states has taken up the cudgels in behalf of citizens placed in similar positions by a man or woman or both, and "coward" and "sneak" are some of the milder terms applied to the practicers of blackmail. It is a sad fact that the victim of an extortion plot, fearing unpleasant publicity, aften gives up large sums to the extortionists. As the Sacramento Bee said editorially:

"Few people, when some one attempts to blackmail them, have enough intestinal fortitude to prosecute."

In most cases all one has to do is to take the matter to the legal authorities and the would-be blackmailer, poltroon that he is, will fade out of the picture.

In our enlightened times, with the public fully aroused to the importance of the wipening out of racketeering in all its forms, the blackmailer must be scourged; he must be given no quarter. We have the machinery ready at hand for the great work and falter we must not.

CROWD ATTENDS MERCHANTS PICNIC

Those who attended the Daly City Merchants' picnic last Sunday at Oak Cove Park enjoyed themselves to the fullest extent. The day was beautiful and the setting ideal for the outing which the merchants had planned months ahead. Notwithstanding the fact that several other picnics were held by organizations of Daly City and vicinity, there was a good crowd in attendance, and all expressed themselves as having a good time.

The Eagles' band led the parade to the grounds, and gave a concert under the oak trees in the park, which added materially to the various pleasures and amusements of the day. This band, which is led by George Brenner, has made such improvement as to be classed as one of the best, if indeed not the best, local band in San Mateo county. It is something Daly City should be proud of, and should help to promote. The only thing they need now are new uniforms and they could make a creditable showing in any parade in San Francisco or elsewhere. This band, if promoted and helped along, would be good advertising for Daly City. Many competent musicians are among the personel, and all are striving for improvement. Let's give them a hand.

Dancing was indulged in by a large number of those present. Others spread the contents of their well-filled baskets on the tables and enjoyed refreshments and social intercourse with old friends, or with new acquaintances. At tables interspersed here and there in the more secluded spots, a circle of friends might be seen eating and drinking and listening to the folk songs and the strum of the accompanying guitar. They lingered till nightfall. Some of them left only when darkness drove them home.

Much of the success of these annual picnics is due, no doubt, to the spirit of harmony, good will and friendship which prevails among the merchants, their patrons, friends and acpuaintances. There was no discord there. There was a nice class of people present, who know how to enjoy themselves, and to add to the happiness of others. We shall have more of these outings.

EAGLES VICTORS IN PITCHING DUEL

A fair sized crowd witnessed as beautiful a pitching duel as has been staged on the high school grounds this season, last Sunday, with Anderson, pitcher for the Fleet team, and Jackie Gerstenberg, for the Eagles, being the opposing pitchers, the Eagles' pitcher coming out on top, the score being 4 to 2.

The boys from the Saratoga started out in the first inning by scoring their two runs on two hits, an error and some daring base running. After this uprising, Jackie twirled shut-out ball, holding the hard-hitting Fleet team to four scattered hits, with Cameron, catcher for the Eagles, outmarting the Navy boys at all times.

The Eagles scored a run in the third and one in the sixth to tie the score. In the eighth inning the local boys cinched the game on hits by Petrocchi, a walk to Johnston, and Rube Conforti connected with a beautiful hit, scoring both runners.

For the Eagles the entire team played great ball, with Varni making a great running catch in center field for the Eagles. Gulledge played great ball at first base for the Navy team, while Anderson pitched a great game, lack of control causing his defeat.

The Eagles will play this coming Sunday on the High School grounds at 2 P. M.

WELCOME CHANGE IN GOLD EMBARGO

By J. W. MARCHBANK
Pioneer in Frontier Mining Work.

Modification of the embargo on the exportation of gold from the United States was bound to come, and it is a matter of gratification to the miners of the country that it has been made. Mining is the basic industry, as we have pointed out at other times, and it would be an altogether anomalous condition for the "big push" now on in commerce, manufactures, and finance, to overlook the producers of gold. It follows as a direct corollary in the "we do our part" campaign that fair treatment should be accorded to mining as to other important factors in national recovery.

Graphic illustration of the difference in getting $20.67 an ounce for newly-mined gold and $30 an ounce is shown in the situation up in Canada, where the mine owners have been receiving about fifty per cent in advance of the standard price, $20.67 for the precious metal, for quite some time.

It has been estimated that Canada will produce from $62,000,000 to $65,000,000 in gold this year, with the estimate based on the so-called standard price, but actually the value of the output will be in the neighborhood of $95,000,000. Difference between standard and actual price is "velvet" to the producer. As A. J. Smith, brilliant financial editor of the Vancouver Sun, recently said, a company may produce $6,000,000 with gold figured at $20.67 an ounce, and with costs at fifty per cent of gross receipts, or $3,000,000, the net profit is $3,000,000. But the company has received about fifty per cent in excess of the standard price, or $3,000,000, against which there are no costs. So profits of the hypothetical concern are actually $6,000,000.

"Will it be necessary for England to allow or force the further fall of her money, paralleling the American dollar, in order to preserve the relative advantage which the fall of the pound has meant to England since 1931?"

The Frenchman states that in the event the English do not take the natural course, American exports will appear, profiting from an irresistible premium. He says the efforts of France for currency stabilization were doomed to failure at the World Economic Commerce, as in the eyes of British commerce the United States looms large and further that Canada, an ardent American country, although a British dominion, pleaded with England not to break with the New World in monetary matters.

The closest of ties exist between the United States and Canada in all important affairs, as is admitted by all deep students of economics.

John R. Sigmore, of Seattle, president of Reliance Gold Mines, recently supervised the opening of 1933 operations of his company's property. He is highly optimistic over the outcome of the present activity. He said:

"There is considerable mining interest around the Wayside end of the Bridge River camp, as a result of discoveries made within the past thirty days."

Mike Gaynor, an old timer, has been engaged to do further prospecting on the Old Reliance properties, which consist of twenty-two claims. Gaynor was the original owner of the Countess claim and he drove the stakes for the original Pioneer claim in 1897.

LEGION AUXILIARY TO MEET TONIGHT

The regular meeting of Daly City Unit No. 410, American Legion Auxiliary, will be held tonight, Friday, August 18. We are expecting our delegates to be present and bring back some very enthusiastic reports and valuable information from the Pasadena convention, which was held the first three days of this week. Everyone be sure to attend. Plans are being made for the installation of the new officers, to be held in September.

There will be a joint whist by the Post and Unit on Tuesday evening, August 29, in Legion Hall.

SAN FRANCISCO GETS NEXT STATE LEGION CONVENTION

San Francisco was chosen as the 1934 convention city for the American Legion, Department of California, last Tuesday, at the Pasadena convention. Fresno, the only other contender, moved to make the vote unanimous after it was apparent San Francisco had won by a wide margin.

WOUNDED VETS TO BE DECORATED

The regular meting of Old Glory Post No. 2044, Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, was held Friday night, August 12, with commander Johnston presiding, and many subjects of mutual interest were brought up for discussion.

We were visited by Comrades Cornell and Hill of the American Legion, who addressed the meeting on the subject of Renovizing our local community, and asking for our support in this worthy cause. This will mean the further employment of many of our unemployed, besides the expenditure of many dollars locally in much needed supplies and repairs. The movement to "Renovize" is sponsored by former Governor Young, and merely means that the property, home and business owners who have delayed with necessary repairs and improvements to their property, do so at once so that the ranks of the unemployed and the empty coffers of local merchants be thinned out and money put back into circulation, respectively. This is a marvelous movement and hope that everyone will enter into the spirit of this movement.

The wounded comrades of the World War, some of whom are members of the local Post of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, will be honored and decorated at a special open meeting, to be held Saturday night August 26, in the Masonic Hall. The public is invited to this impressive ceremony, and plans at the present time include presentation of the Purple Heart by Colonel Wm. H. Tobin, U. S. A., retired, to represent the U. S. Army. A good orchestra will be there to furnish dancing for the evening, and it looks like a very interesting evening for all who attend, and it is hoped that many will turn out.

The regular monthly dance of the Post will be held Saturday night August 19, in the Eagles Hall. These dances are becoming more and more popular all the time, and we are mighty proud of the excellent work of Chairman Fred Collins, who makes them so successful. If you want an evening of fun, frolic and good times, reserve that night for the Veterans' dance.

The plans for the formation of the San Mateo and Santa Clara County Council, Veterans of Foriegn Wars, is rapidly taking form and will be functioning as a well organized unit in the next few weeks.

Our National Patriotic instructor has given us briefly the outline of the program for the year with respect to Communism, and I am sure that we will have some very interesting and authoritative information for the people in the near future. This is one movement that cannot gain a foothold in this land of ours, and it behooves every loyal thinking American to put his shoulder to the wheel and combat this well organized movement.

The Post has gone on record as unreservedly and whole heartedly supporting the N. R. A. and its principles, and its results are being felt already. We hope that every one, individual as well as every business man, will get behind this movement and help ourselves get out of this depression. War has been declared on unemployment, and with the unemployed back to gainful occupations, purchasing power and greater profits will be restored, our relief work will be minimized, and we will see smiles, not scowls on the faces of our citizens. Lets all get behind this movement and put it over with a bang.

FRED R. LINSER, Adjutant.

SURPRISE BIRTHDAY PARTY

A number of friends of Charles Williamson, of Vista Grande avenue, gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Heim, of San Diego avenue, last Saturday night. From the Heim home they marched to the Williamson home and took possesison of the basement, which had been prepared for the occasion. One member of this happy band pretended to make a social call upon Mr. Williamson to wish him many happy returns of the day. Suddenly the lights went out. The unsuspecting host went into the basement to see what was wrong, and got the surprise of his life. His friends were all there to wish him a very happy birthday. A most enjoyable evening was spent. Delicious refreshments were enjoyed, and in the early hours of the morning the guests departed for home.

After a three-weeks' sojourn, the San Mateo county grand jury resumed its investigation into county affairs last Tuesday afternoon with Foreman Martin Poss, of San Mateo, non-committal on the nature of the business.

HERE IS THE TRUTH

About the Economy of Operation of the

NEW FORD V-8 CAR

As Approved by the

"KNOW THE TRUTH" ECONOMY RUN

Completed Saturday Noon after 14 Days and Nights of Average Driving

In conducting the new Ford V-8 Economy Run a stock model 4 Door De Luxe sedan was selected. The run was sponsored by Ford dealers in Daly City and Colma, South San Francisco, Santa Clara, San Jose, Mountain View, Palo Alto, Redwood City, San Mateo, Burlingame and San Bruno, and the course of the run was through these same towns, approximately 92 miles the round trip. Dealers from each town, their employes and accompanying observers did the driving.

Keys to the gasoline and oil tanks were held by Chiefs of Police in each city, who supervised and recorded the amounts of gas, oil and water needed at each filling during the entire run.

The object of the run was to prove the economy of operation of the new Ford V-8 under the same driving conditions as employed over a period of one year. Five trips every twenty-four hours (day and night) for 14 days were made, which means that the car was under practically continuous operation. Stops were made at each dealer's place of business as well as service stations, who supplied the gas and oil for the run.

The car was serviced every thousand miles—just the same as any owner of a new automobile will do. There were no trick driving or stunts which might favor the car more than careful Mr. Average Motorist favors his own.

The results tabulated on the right more than prove Ford's claim to being a most economical and practical automobile—justifying every claim made for it.

"WE DO OUR PART"

The Liberty Loan posters, of recent memory, have their successor now, It is a blue eagle against a white background, with the letters NRA at top and the motto "We Do Our Part" below. One of the eagle's claws clutches a cog-wheel, the other holds to what might be a modernist's idea of a handful of wheat, or bolts of lightning. It is the emblem of the National Recovery Administration, and represents one of the cleverest attempts yet made to produce an end through force of public opinion.

Contrary to many persons' belief, the President has no legal means of forcing wage and work agreements on business. He and his advisors became impatient at the way codes were going—it took several weeks to produce one, that of the textile industry. The blanket appeal was the result.

In effect, the government is saying: "Of course, you don't have to do this, but—!"

And that is a very important "but," indeed. Recalcitant businesses are apt to find themselves faced with a boycott. Mr. Roosevelt has the great mass of the public with him, and he is making the most of it.

Agreements have been signed by the millions, and the idea is genuinely popular. Every business is made to feel that it has the President, personally, as a director and adviser.

The press, irrespective of party, is behind the move, as are Chambers of Commerce and other organizations.

If the plan doesn't work as expected, it won't be because there was lack of aggressiveness and speed at the top.

Many immigrants have risen to high estate, and such may be the good fortune of Atostolos Tavaliscoulos Panagiotakogoules, recently naturalized in Boston. But the Traveler expresses the hope that for his own sake Mr. Panagiotakogoules does not rise to be secretary of the treasury and have to sign his name to many thousands of Liberty Bonds and the like.

That Kansas hen evidently violated her code when she lad four eggs in one day.

CIRCLING THE GLOBE

No one has ever really circled the globe, because to literally do that would mean going around the world at its circumference, whether by following the equator or otherwise. But going around the world is generally understood to mean any passage around the earth between the two poles.

How the time required for this feat has been reduced is strikingly illustrated by the fact that Magellen's ship Victory, the first to circumnavigate the globe in the accepted sense, took three years, lacking twelve days, for its voyage, 1519 to 1522.

Drake made it in 1,052 days, something over a half century later. Cavendish in 1856 sailed from Plymouth, England, and returned in 781 days.

Then, challenged by Jules Verne's book, "Around the World in Eighty Days," Nellie Bly, a newspaper woman, went around the world by boat and train in seventy-two days in 1889. The next year George Francis Train did the stunt in sixty-seven days. Other records ranging around forty days were made in the succeeding years before the advent of the airplane.

In 1827, Linton and Wells, employing train, boat and airplane, completed the circuit in twenty-eight days. In 1928, Mears and Collyer reduced the time to twenty-four days. The dirigible Graf Zeppelin, in 1929, cut the record to twenty-one days.

Then came the real record-breakers. Wiley Post and Harold Gatty in 1931 made the trip by airplane in eight days, fifteen hours and fifty-one minutes.

A few days ago the speediest world flight of all time was made by Wiley Post, one-eyed aviator, flying alone, in seven days, eighteen hours and forty-nine minutes. And that's something for other globe trotters to shoot at.

We read that former Mayor Jimmy Walker may become a gentleman farmer in England. Some will insist that he will become simply a farmer.

In the old days a person working only thirty-five hours out of 168 would have been considered nearly unemployed.

STUDENTS AND BEER

Citizens who are neither fanatical drys nor fanatical wets, but who desire to promote real temperance by whatever means seems best, are watching with interest the results of the legalization of beer by the recent session of Congress.

Some expressions by college and university authorities on the subject, in the light of their observations since the new law became effective on April 7, seems pertinent at this time.

President Hopkins of Dartmouth College, where beer is permitted to be sold on the campus, declares that "there would seem to be a tendency for beer to displace hard liquor in undergraduate consumption."

Similar views are expressed by Dean Hawkes and Professor Pitkin of Columbia University, Dean Works of the University of Chicago, President Britt of Knox College, and Dr. Fairchiled of New York University, to name only a few who have given special attention to the reaction of students to the new dispensation.

Needless to say, all the educators named desire to see drinking of intoxicants in their institutions reduced to the minimum. Every good citizen desires to promote temperance. If harmless light beer can be substituted for vile bootleg liquor, a decided gain in the desired direction will have been made.

NEW FRENCH LOTTERY

Hard pressed by need for funds, the French government is about to adopt an old expedient to replenish its coffers—a national lottery.

Lotteries are generally held in disrepute these days, but in former times they were common. For several years, back in its early history, Harvard University was partially supported by a lottery, and the United States government authorized many such enterprises in the first years of the nineteenth century.

According to press reports, the proposed new French lottery will provide that 60 per cent of the sums realized from ticket sales will be distributed to prize winners, while the remaining 40 per cent will go to the government.

The act under which the lottery will operate specifies that the first ten million francs accruing to the government shall be distributed to "destitute families, the victims of agricultural calamities and droughts."

A commission of distinguished war veterans will conduct the lottery's operations, and no income tax will be charged winners on their gains.

The odds against a ticket buyer are heavy, but human nature being what it is, there will no doubt be many customers for the new gamble, even at the odds encountered.

A PRIZE JACKASS

Numerous stories are told, some true and some untrue, of the stupidity of government officials "clothed with a little brief authority." One which seems to be well authenticated was told in press dispatches recently about a federal deputy game warden in Indiana.

A humane gentleman and bird lover named Foster Lewis found a red bird with a broken leg in his back yard. He had the wounded bird's leg set, cared for it and nursed it back to health. After the bird was well, it refused to leave its benefactor and persisted in staying about the house.

Then comes the deputy game warden, who points out to Mr. Lewis that he is violating the federal migratory bird law by keeping a red bird on his premises. And Mr. Lewis is arrested.

We don't know how the case came out, but if that game warden was not fired and branded as the prize jackass of 1933, he didn't get what was coming to him.

APPENDICITIS AGE 25

The age at which most people develop appendicitis is in their twenties, with a preponderance of cases occurring about the age of 25, according to Dr. Roland M. Harper, who has studied 267 cases treated in a hospital with which he has been in close touch.

While the ages of patients ranged from 6 to 65 years, the average was 25, for either whites or negroes, male or female, in city or country.

Dr. Harper points out that this finding closely agrees with statistics of hospitals in various parts of the country, and may be taken as a fair average for the entire population.

Appendicitis, he says, is evidently a disease which generally attacks persons in the prime of life, like tuberculosis and typhoid fever. Except in a relatively small percentage of cases, it rarely attacks the very young or those past middle age.

Those over 50 years of age are rarely troubled with appendicitis, but, as there are exceptions, everyone should be alert to detect symtoms of the disease and obtain treatment promptly.

Signing your code and trusting to luck is probably better than going crazy trying to understand it.

A pedestrian is a man whose family is away on vacation.

CASHING IN ON VICE

Somehow we never could quite follow the idea that a supposedly reformed crook was the ideal character for soul saving activities, but many seem to think otherwise.

In a recent issue of a Montgomery, Alabama, newspaper is an account of the former career of an evangelist, one whose principal stock in trade seems to be his unsavory past record. The article, doubtless inspired by the reverend gentleman himself, gives a shameless and rather boastful narrative of his former sins.

It declared that he had been a prize fighter, a saloon keeper, a bootlegger, and followed other occupations generally regarded as not those followed by a good churchman. After completing a penitentiary sentence for violating the prohibition law, he got religion and entered the ministry.

Now, if the gentleman's reformation is real and sincere, his past bad record should not be held against him. But why should he drag that record into print? The only reasonable answer is that he is trying to surround himself with a cheap glamor, in order to attract the attention of the moron element which delights in glorifying past and present criminals.

EAT AND REDUCE

It isn't necessary to starve one's self in order to reduce weight, declares a New York doctor, a leading woman specialist of that city, who prescribes a liberal diet for her too heavy patients. This is her recommendation for the day's meals:

For breakfast, a serving of fruit, one egg plus the white of another egg, coffee or tea without sugar. For lunch, a large serving of lean meat, fish or fowl may be taken, or a small helping of either, with a glass of buttermilk, or skimmed milk, also any vegetables that grow above the ground. For dinner a liberal portion of lean meat again may be taken, with vegetables and fruit, but no bread, using a bread substitute if desired. Before retiring a half cup of orange juice is permissable.

On such a diet, the doctor asserts that thirteen of her women patients reduced about 30 pounds in thirteen week, while one lost 72 and another lost 74 pounds in about nine months.

We do not guarantee this information, but simply pass it along as it was given to a women's medical society at a recent meeting.

MOTORIST WHO TAKES CHANCES

You see them on streets and highways every day—motorists who take chances.

You see them turning corners at high speeds. Or stealing another car's right of way. Or passing on hills and curves. Or driving on the wrong side of the road. Or cutting in and out of thick traffic. Or coming roaring into intersections and road junctions without looking to either side. Or operating at speeds which are obviously higher than are safe under driving conditions of the moment. And, every once in a while, you see such a motorist cause an accident. Perhaps there is little damage done. Or perhaps a life is lost and valuable property is needlessly destroyed.

The reckless motorist comprises 10 per cent or less of the driving population. But he causes 90 per cent of the accidents. If the reckless drivers simply injured each other, it wouldn't be particularly important to the rest of us. But they seldom do that—they maim and kill the careful, the competent, the prudent. And you never know who's going to be next.

This year about 30,000 people are going to be killed because someone was careless, reckless, discourteous. Not one of a thousand of those deaths is really due to unavoidable accident—an occurrence which is almost as rare as the dodo. They can all be prevented. And they will be when there is a concerted public drive against those who make places of carnage out of public highways.

BUILDING FOR TOMORROW

The New York Times editorially suggests that some of the public works money might profitably be spent for scientific investigation, and points out that work done in laboratories is, in the long run, often the best maker of jobs of all.

That is an excellent suggestion. The government is spending hundreds of millions in construction projects which, once accomplished, will have ended their usefulness so far as providing substantial employment is concerned. Why not spend a little in seeking to produce new industrial wells from which permanent jobs may eventually be drawn? Entirely new jobs, rather than temporary employment to be followed again by unemployment or overcrowding of existing industry, is what our country really needs.

A western athletic authority deplores the fact that so many college men go into professional baseball, declaring that money spent in educating baseball players is wasted. We fail to ge the logic of his idea. Anyway, how can we keep college men from playing professional ball, unless we make each Freshman sign a pledge or give a bond? We do not refuse education to young men through fear that they might become bootleggers, bank robbers, or professional reformers. Why, then, should we be so apprehensive lest they take to baseball?

Over Three Hundred Deer Killed on Opening Day

Deer hunters who went forth on opening day of the deer season in the coastal districts were more successful this year than for many years past. Deer tags returned to the Division of Fish and Game show that 316 bucks were shot. For the same period of 1932 only 213 tags were sent in. This does not include all the deer killed August 1, for tags will come straggling in for several days. However, it indicates the hunters are having plenty of sport and deer are plentiful.

Mendocino county, as in past years, leads all the others, thirty-nine being reported killed. Monterey is second with 30; San Luis Obispo with 26; Sonoma and Santa Clara, 23 each; Santa Barbara 24; Ventura 17; Colusa and Marin 14 apiece. San Mateo 13 and Lake 12.

There has been a large number of four and three pointers brought in, and some five pointers. One hunter in Monterey county killed a six point buck, but was so excited about the incident that he forgot to sign his name to the deer tag.

Several hunters got their limit the first day. Charles Erwin, of Pasadena shot a two pointer at 11 A. M., August 1, and at 3 P. M. got his second, near Alamo mountains, Ventura.

Walter L. Trade of San Francisco got a three pointer in the morning and in the afternoon got another, at Nashmead, Mendocino county.

During the first quarter of 1933, 6,312 Jews and 515 non-Jews entered Palestine, says the Jewis statistical bureau.

NO FREE HUNTING FOR VETERANS IN CALIFORNIA

Misled by reports that disabled veterans, with two years residence in California, would be given free hunting and fishing licenses, many have made application to the State Division of Fish and Game offices. The claim was made that Assembly Bill No. 544 provided for free permits. In its original form this feature was incorporated in the bill, but when it came up on the floor of the two houses, the free license feature was eliminated.

As the bill now stands, it has to do with the fixing of the price of licenses, and authorizing county clerks to collect them, and each month turn over all moneys thus collected to the Fish and Game Preservation fund.

The fish and game laws make no porisisons for free hunting and angling licenses to any persons, except G. A. R. veterans.

FORLORN ISLAND

SYNOPSIS

With his yacht, the Intrepid, abandoned by its crew, Felix Horton, millionaire, with his mother, his daughter Nan, and Roy Stuart, puts into Squaw Harbor, Alaska, to recruit. He engages a bunch of nondescripts stranded there. A gigantic Pole, Sandomar, is their leader. Captain Waymire, the Intrepid's skipper, is an old friend of Eric Ericssen, unemployed sailor, and Eric engages to sail as chief officer. Nan and Eric indulge in a moonlight flirtation, which brings them both to the threshold of love. The Intrepid is wrecked. Eric takes command of a small boat, with Horton and his party. Unable to help, they watch Sandomar kill Captain Waymire and leave the ship with his crowd. On landing, they learn there is no communication with the outside world. Fireheart, priestess of the island, descended from a white man in the remote past, knowing a little English, welcomes the castaways. Sandomar declares there shall be no law on the island, but Eric, having the only gun, cows him for the time, declaring he is the law. He lays out work for all. Eric's love for Nan swells, and he tells her he means to win her for his mate. She is not unwilling. Fireheart claims Eric as her own, and realizing the importance of her friendship he is forced to temporize. Defending himself from attack, Eric's revolver apparently misfires. Sandomar, deaf, does not hear the trigger fall, nor realize Eric's defenselessness. He turns away and Garge follows him. Eric finds the revolver, which had been Waymire's, is rim-fire, while five of its six cartridges are center-fire. Eric has one effective cartridge. He determines on a showdown, calling a meeting, at which "Swede," makes an attempt on his life. He uses his one cartridge, killing "Swede," but is left defenseless, though master of the situation, since he alone knows his gun is useless.

In the late afternoon Nan and Eric sat alone on the bird-cliffs, looking out over the weary sea, and searching each other's hearts for strength to carry on.

"How long have we been here, Eric?"

"Is that all? It seems we've been here always—never known anything else. Eric, what would you give to see a sail out there?" The dull red of her cheeks deepened and spread. "A ship we could signal to, that would come in, and take us home!"

"I wouldn't give you. My hopes of you, I mean." There was no one in hearing, only a few Aleuts, including Fireheart, tending the nets. So Eric spoke from his heart. "Yet that's just what I'd have to give, if a ship came now."

"Do you think we'd pass out of each other's lives?"

"I would pass out of yours. You'd forget these nine days, at most they'd be like a dream."

"You'd forget, too, Eric. Because it is only nine days, after all." Her lids dropped over her lustrous eyes. "If we parted, you might take it hard, but it would leave no scar."

"You mean, I'm not in love with you yet?"

"I suppose that's what I do mean. We have had no chance to be lovers, nothing but honored antagonists. You don't have to tell me, because I know."

There was a long silence. The terns danced their aerial minuet over the foam. "If we stayed here ninety days—or nine hundred—I could never win. Is that what you're telling me?"

"I believe so. Even leaving out Roy—and he's always in my thoughts—I'd still fear that it was only shipwreck that brought us together, and shipwreck would surely part us. Our ways are far apart. I want to go back to my old life; I wouldn't dare, no matter how much I am tempted, erect a permanent barrier to shut it out; and it's a life that you, of all men, could never share."

"No. I'll have to stay by the sea and the snow. . . . Well, in that case I suppose you and Roy might as well follow Marie and Wilcox. The same as Marie, you'll be safer as some man's mate. It will please Fireheart, and maybe I can forget a hopeless dream." His eyes were hard as blue diamonds. "The sooner you do it the better."

"I don't think I love him, yet. But if you think best—I'll make a marriage of convenience."

For a long time there was no sound but the angry surge of the waves under the cliff, and the shriek of the sea-birds.

Eric was called to himself at last by the flick of a long shadow at the corner of his eye. He was never to know why it startled him so, and could only thank some sixth sense which his life's war with the raw powers of the North had nurtured in his brain. His head never turned, but his eyes moved in their sockets.

Along the crest of the bluff, forty feet up, Fireheart came stealing. She was almost directly behind and over Nan.

Eric had caught only one glimpse of the priestess when she vanished behind the big boulders of the summit. With the sensation of sudden bitter cold in his vitals, he sprang to his feet and whirled. He was not a split second too soon, and quite possibly too late. Destruction in the shape of a hundred-pound boulder started lunging down the bluff.

Nan was sitting in the trough of the slope, in the certain track of the missile. Even a glancing blow would hurl her off the ledge, to the churning water below. Yet two factors fought for her—one was Eric leaping toward her now, his hand sweeping toward hers. The other was the shape of the stone, not round but angular, so that it made toward her in angry bounds, sometimes sliding on the steep escarpment, rather than in an accelerating cannon-ball roll.

Struggling up, her hand snatched his. He seemed to jerk her headlong through the air into his arms. Thunder rattled in her ear, a passing whirlwind raised the hair on her head, and the big rock splashed impotently into the sea.

Eric's arm clung about her shoulders, pressing her close as though he could never let her go.

"There's some one up there," she gasped.

"It's Fireheart."

"Did she do this thing?"

"Perhaps not. Many of those boulders start at a touch. But we've got to find out."

He turned and led the way up the steep trail. They found Fireheart on the summit, her arms rigid at her sides, her head thrown back, a sharp agony on her face. Quietly Eric spoke her name.

"I no roll the stone," she muttered. "I see him on brink, just over white girl, I touch him, and evil spirit get in Fireheart's hand, give big push."

"I understand," Nan said. "Don't worry about it any more."

"Fireheart no understand." The slanted eyes were thin crescents of glittering jet. "Why White Chief jump up, almost get hit himself, jerk you out of way? Guess maybe he no catch love for Fireheart because he love you."

Nan knew that she must answer straight. This was neither the time nor the place for subtleties. All things had been reduced to their primal simplicity. She and Fireheart were not now society girl and squaw, but just two maidens ripe for mating; and Eric completed the triangle that is the first form, the eternal symbol of love-selection that has evolved mankind.

"He doesn't love me," Nan said quietly. "He told me so."

"How Fireheart know? Maybe you tell big lie." Fiercely she whirled to Eric. "She say you no love her. Then you promise no try to get her, let Roy marry her quick."

"I can't promise that." It was Eric's deep, vibrant tone, no less than his words, that made Nan catch her breath. "I am going to try to win her, Fireheart. I wanted her before I ever came here—you must understand it now, and be my friend. I don't mean to let Roy have her."

Fireheart nodded darkly, then turned imperiously to Nan. "You love White Chief?"

Nan shook her head slowly.

"He say he want you, try get you. If you tell Fireheart you no want him—promise true you no let him get you, no never—promise marry Roy heap quick—then Fireheart still be your friend, be White Chief's friend, too. What you say?"

"Answer her," Eric urged. "This matter may as well be settled now as later."

Nan squared her shoulders and threw up her glossy head. Then she spoke with a low, clear 'cello tone.

"I can't promise that. I can't—make a promise—that I may—have to break."

Eric's heart leaped like a king-salmon free of the barb, triumphant from the dark water, but the squaw's black eyes glowed like those of some tenacled bottom-thing, hauled up by the trawls. "Fireheart see now. She no forget. Her love is big ocean in sunlight, bright, warm, good, but her no-love is heap white floe come down from North, no look across, no make hole through, grind up big rocks to little pebble."

"Won't you still be our friend?" Eric asked.

Fireheart shook her head sullenly. "Love, him change to no-love, taste bitter in mouth." She raised her arms in an imperious and dramatic gesture. "I am Fireheart, priestess of Lost People. Aleuts, they do what I say. I tell 'em you no my friend, I tell 'em watch chance, turn quick with spears when you no have little gun, kill you, drive you away. Big god who come from West, he do what Fireheart say too. I tell him bring you bad luck, make you die slow, plenty hurt. Fireheart, she wish stone run over you both, knock you into sea."

* * * * * * *

Exile on Forlorn island changed slowly from an incredible dream to vivid reality. Eric's stern reign seemed like that of an ancient dynasty, the natural order of things. It was commonplace to be living in the hourly threat of Sandomar's fury, Fireheart's malice. As Nan toiled with her slant-eyed sisters, less and less often did her swift hands pause and her eyes film over as she day-dreamed of a lost world, a pre-existence half-forgotten.

Yet it was not all twilight. Nan's little muscles hardened under strain, and sometimes she was surprised at the airy swing of her stride, the depth and freedom of her breathing. Her calloused hands no longer bled at the fish-cleaning; though she might crawl in her fur-bed dizzy with fatigue, she sprang out at sunrise with a tingle in her veins and a glow on her tawny skin. She became skillful with the nets, deadly with the salmon spear—and a good catch was almost as satisfactory as a bridge prize long ago, before her soul had transmigrated to the body of a white squaw. As the summer advanced, she was given new tasks, most of them hard, many of them perilous, but almost all of them blood-stirring, breath-taking.

In these wild days, her laughter as well as her tears seemed easy to flow. Her thrills were no longer "synthetic"; she was warmer, less self-centered. This growth was revealed, not only in her quick moods—mirth, indignation, pity, loneliness—but subtly in her face. Her hands grew red and calloused, but in the shadow of her parka-hood the luster of her hazel eyes set Roy's cool head awhirl, and the curve of her full lips made Eric's viking heart glow with the lust of conquest.

It was the month of ripening, bud to flower, fledgling in the nest to winged courier of the air; but Nan's friendship for Roy had not yet ripened into love. Marriage with him would still be for convenience, not for deep need of her heart and soul. And it was true that Eric stole too often into her thoughts. Her good sense told her that Eric could never share the scenes to which sometime she must return—that beyond these crags and windy wastes they would have little in common—but how dreamy those scenes became, and how vivid and real the sand-dunes of Forlorn island! The barrier between her and the blond viking was not half so strong as the sea reefs enforcing her exile. Future shipwreck as his mate was a far-to-morrow's evil, but the shelter of his arms was today's need.

In the maze of adventure, part and parcel of her exile, she saw Eric in a new light. One warm afternoon at the drying racks, a young squaw at her side gave a sudden, sharp gasp. Wheeling, she beheld the shadow of agony fall on the leathern face, linger a few poignant seconds, then pass slowly away.

"What is it?" Nan begged.

The squaw, a last fall's bride named Chigum (Flower), could not understand the words, but the quick pity in the alien eyes went straight to her heart. An expression only a great artist could paint stole into the dark countenance. Nan's own heart leaped wildly. Here was something imponderably sad, yet close to the sublime, primal, eternal.

A forlorn half smile touched the coarse lips. The eyes gazed off as into another world, down the long vista of the centuries with that far, magic sight which no son of Adam ever dreamed, and which comes to Eve's daughters only a few times from the cradle to the grave. "Koticky," she answered simply. At once she began to put her flint tools into her seal-hide poke, signifying that she would go now to another labor.

"Koticky" was a word that Nan had learned. It meant "baby." As she stared, bewildered, Chigum turned and trudged away toward her turf-house. The other squaws grunted and went back to drying fish.

"Aren't you going with her?" Nan demanded.

They looked up, puzzled, and one of them spoke in a tone dark with fatalism. At once Nan realized that she alone must answer the call. Mother Horton and Marie were in the berry-flats, out of reach; Eric and the hunters were spearing sea-lions on the far beach. With a bitter cry, Nan dropped her own tools and hurried after the squat figure reeling to her dread appointment.

CALIFORNIA NEWS REVIEW

Speeding work to provide jobs, Earl Lee Kelly, state public works director, announces the opening of bids and the award of contracts on ten highway jobs aggregating $303,435. The projects lie in Los Angeles, Alameda, Marin, Sonoma, Mariposa, Merced, Fresno and Kern counties.

Evidencing decreasing markets, State Agricultural Director A. A. Brock announced a drop of 50 per cent in values of California agricultural products to farmers in the last four years. He said fruit, truck garden and field crops, plus livestock products, totalled in figures $728,975,000 in 1929, compared with only $375,525,000 for the last year.

Issuance of a $6,000,000 block of the $20,000,000 unemployment relief bonds approved by the Legislature and the voters was sanctioned at a meeting held in Sacramento recently by the Relief Finance Committee. State Relief Administrator R. C. Branion and other State officials ordered the bonds issued for loans to cities and counties to be used for alleviation of destitution and support of public works projects provided for in the bond act.

The State Workmen's Compensation Insurance Act will not apply, under legislation signed by Governor James Rolph recently, to workers temporarily given jobs by municipal and county relief agencies. The bill was introduced by Assemblyman Thomas A. Maloney, San Francisco. State relief organizations contended that without it they would be forced to carry heavy insurance, seriously interfering with their welfare program expenditures.

A. C. Hanson of Santa Barbara was elected president of the newly organized Motor Court Trade Association of California. Other officers elected are: S. A. Davis, Oakland, vice president; G. E. Henderson, Merced, secretary; C. E. Jones, Merced, treasurer; directors, W. S. McGuinnis, Tulare; W. K. Bowker, Calexico; J. W. Vengriss, Sacramento; Mrs. J. K. Shireman, Eureka; Bearl Sprott, Los Angeles, and J. E. Young, San Diego.

Typhoid fever cases are setting a record low, according to Dr. Giles S. Porter, State Health Department director. "To date this year, only 197 cases have been reported," said the official. "This gives us the lowest incidence on record for the first six months of a year." Thirteen cases reported from the Coachella Valley were believed due to unsanitary conditions in labor camps. The department recommended a program to improve them.

Establishment of the Northern California boxers and wrestlers benefit fund to assist needy boxers and wrestlers was announced recently by the State Athletic Commission. Judge George J. Steiger of San Francisco was named chairman of the board which will pass upon all cases. The fund will be maintained from a donation of 1 per cent of all boxing and wrestling purses. All moneys are to be advanced as loans only. No one will receive assistance who has not been a resident of California for a year and who has not participated in at least six bouts.

Earl Lee Kelly, director of the State Department of Public Works, said a new State highway district, No. 11, will be established at San Diego. This, Kelly said, means the addition of between fifty and sixty families to San Diego's population. The new district will include San Diego, Imperial and that part of Riverside county south and west of Indio. E. E. Wallach of Fresno probably will be the engineer in charge of the district, Kelly said. The pay-roll increase in San Diego, Kelly declared, will be approximately $100,000 annually. If rental agreements cannot be completed the State contemplates constructing highway shops and other buildings in San Diego that will cost $40,000.

Fulfilling the government's determination to fight "fire with fire" in a program to wipe out gangsterism, as outlined by President Roosevelt's official associates following several recent sensational kidnapings, agents of the Department of Justice, working out of the United States Bureau of Investigation, who hitherto have worked unarmed, are to be taught to use all manner of firearms, including submachine guns, army service revolvers and rifles. Joseph Dunn, agent in charge of the Los Angeles branch of the bureau, with offices in the Federal Building, recently received a consignment of the machine guns, automatic shot guns, revolvers and rifles and ammunition.

It won't be long now! Governor Rolph signed the bill which repeals restrictions on the sale of 3.2 beer within one and one-half miles of the University of California campus. It will be 91 days from the time of bill signing before the new law goes into effect.

Public works projects for every county in California, numbering more than 700 and totaling more than $250,000,000, have been submitted by the State Chamber of Commerce to Justus Wardell, district administrator of the national public works program.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted by William Bruckart

Washington.—No one can watch Washington these days and not be amazed at the tremendous driving force that is being put behind the several schemes to awaken the nation and get business going again. It is as though the war engines of a powerful foreign enemy were pounding at the fortifications marking the threshold of our country which, indeed, is true, except that the enemy, depression, is and has been among us through almost four years. I think I can say without fear of successful contradiction that governmental activity is as feverish, as wildly unsystematic, if you please, as any we observed during the trying days of the great World war. Though it is along different lines, the activity is none the less as direct and as positive, and in some respects as militaristic.

Great Drive for Recovery

In such an analogy as this, it should be stated that the federal forces are now being subjected to more severe influence throughout the land than they faced during the preparation for and prosecution of the World war. Then, there was a physical fear which could be held up before the people as a reason for united action. That threat cannot be employed now. In its absence the government is unable to overcome the innate selfishness that must be largely overcome to make the general recovery program a success.

In the beginning of the World war, ih was necessary to strike quickly and hard at the enemy military plans. In the current campaign, it is necessary to strike quickly and hard or else some business interests will wait to see how the picture is going to look in order to gain some advantage for themselves. Thus, the campaign is at least partially spoiled. The reason for the thunderous drive, the mental and muscle strain of these days becomes apparent. If the objections of those who are hesitant about signing are broadly heard, others who had wanted to conform get suspicious about the concessions they have made and begin to shy away.

Therefore, throughout the government one finds today weary-eyed executives, tired clerks, near exhaustion from the endless hours of labor. For example, in the agricultural adjustment administration and in the nation recovery administration, clerks are working in three shifts, and the executives may be found in their offices anywhere from sun-up until long after the following midnight. Whether you are completely convinced of the efficacy of the various plans and programs, or whether you just hope they may be successful, your admiration and respect for those who are trying to construct this new machinery certainly is warranted.

President Saves the Day

As a sample of the driving force that has been exerted and is being exerted every day to a greater or less extent, was the solution of the wrangle presented in the Pennsylvania strike situation. That was not an ordinary strike. Its portents were nationwide. It involved questions the answers to which meant the making or the breaking of the basic recovery principles.

In the first instance, the most powerful corporate unit in the world—the United States Steel corporation—was the government's adversary. I say the government's adversary because unless the recovery administration was able to reconcile the differences between the corporation and the union workers, the program of blanket codes and group codes and everything else was imperiled. Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator, could not get the warring groups together. He was ready to throw up the sponge. But he had one more trick in the bag and that was to call for help from the President of the United States. Somehow, that trick worked. Whether the merits of the case were with the corporation or whether they were with the government, the power of the government was and had to be supreme in the emergency.

While observers here are not inclined to defend the steel corporation fully for taking the position it did, it can be said with equal force that most of them believe there was real danger of infringement of private property rights. In this sense, therefore, the corporation was within its rights in resisting. When it yielded, it appears, it yielded not to the labor unions which had stirred up the trouble, but to the sovereignty of government.

The basic controversy involved in the steel corporation case was the question of so-called company unions. Labor leaders, the professionals, naturally want to have all workers in the national organizations. Otherwise, the strike as a weapon is ineffective. Being quick to see a vulnerable spot, labor took advantage of the situation to lick the steel corporation which heretofore has permitted its employees to belong only to company unions. In other words, it has been an open shop. In view of these facts, it seems to me that organized labor is as much entitled to criticism in the circumstance as is the greatest corporation in the world. Organized labor has been wielding too much influence in the recovery organization according to the consensus here, and its insistence on advantages promises further difficulties.

To Check Profiteering

The Department of Agriculture has set for itself the big job of establishing fair prices for the consumer while giving what is tantamount to a guarantee of higher prices for the things the farmer produces. Through a series of statements, Secretary Wallace has repeatedly affirmed that the returns to the farmers must be increased in every direction. Simultaneously, Dr. Fred C. Howe, who as the consumers' counsel represents the side of the buyers in the government's agricultural set-up, made the announcement that he was going to compile weekly lists of prices for publication as a means of protecting against the profiteer.

From this arrangement it would be made to appear that there will have to be reasonable prices maintained everywhere on food commodities. But observers here have been picking up numerous angles of the situation which they believe contain elements of trouble. Doctor Howe, of course, will be able to gather price lists at whatever rate and in whatever volume he desires, and he can get them distributed through the press and through the radio to the bulk of the people of the United States. But the question that is being asked here is, what method is Doctor Howe going to employ that will fix a price just and reasonable everywhere and provide the farmers with all of the return promised them? Some of the more critical say there is a likelihood that Doctor Howe is going to run into a difference of opinion, what with farmers demanding more, added expenses forcing the retailer to charge more and the ultimate consumer with limited means of buying the things concerned.

Of course, there can be no doubt but that some retailers are going to try to capitalize on the situation and profiteer on prices. Doctor Howe is set to defeat them by the weight of public opinion which must be regarded as a commendable course. Yet, according to the consensus one finds in Washington, that which Doctor Howe announces as a fair and reasonable price is unlikely always to fit the situation.

It's a Tough Problem

In the course of negotiations between the recovery administrators and industrial representatives, one of the great problems was how to arrange a fair basis for competition when different factories had such widely different costs of production. The highly efficient plant could produce at much lower cost, obviously, than could the plant that was obsolete in equipment and managed in haphazard fashion. The same situation obtains with respect to retailers. Chain stores with great buying power and the resultant advantage of lower prices are naturally going to be able to sell at a lower price than the independent store owner who buys in small quantities and has higher overhead costs. Now, say the critical-minded, if Doctor Howe fixes as a fair price that for which the chain store is able to sell its goods, what is going to happen to the independents? If, on the other hand, the price level quoted by Doctor Howe approximates the price charged by the independent, then the chain store can and undoubtedly will get all of the business. It will make use of those figures in advertising the fact that the chain store prices are "below the government price." Manifestly, that will be unfair to the independent. But, I am prompted to ask, what can Doctor Howe do about it?

In announcing his program to establish fair prices, Doctor Howe said there were consumers' councils being organized in scores of cities and towns. These, he averred, would help in seeing that no merchant profiteered. There can be no doubt of the fact that these consumers' councils will exert a tremendous influence. Old-timers here, however, recalled that the fight against profiteering during the World war developed many nasty situations. Overzealous individuals, conscientious in their efforts, but sometimes a bit shy of horse sense, made a personal matter out of such things as patriotic action.

Prof. Raymond Moley has been detached as assistant secretary of state to have charge of the federal government's campaign against crime, especially kidnaping and racketeering. It was the first break in the "brain trust," that group of professors with whom the President surrounded himself. Some weeks ago I wrote in these columns the prediction that such a result had to come. It was obvious. The professor and his theories can be used by the statesmen and practical men only so far. Professor Moley was of no use to Secretary Hull in the Department of State after his adventures in connection with the London economic conference and the unfavorable publicity that the professor caused. In assisting Professor Moley to the job of banishing crime, the President said later he would put him back as assistant secretary of state.

Good Health and Its Contributing Factors

By A. A. SHAGHOIAN, M. D.

Food.—As was stated last week, in this article, different elements of food, their sources and function, will be discussed.

Carbohydrates.—Carbohydrates are either sugar or starches. They are made up of the chemical elements carbon, hydrogen and oxygen. They are the ready fuel for energy because they can easily be broken down into their simpler forms and utilized by the body.

We often think there is only one sugar, that is ordinary table sugar, (cane sugar). But there are really five sugars in our daily food; four of these come from plants and vegetables, as (1) cane sugar or sucrose from cane and sugar beets; (2) glucose and (3) fructose from vegetables, plants and juices of fruits, (4) maltose which is formed by breaking down of grain starch, and (5) lactose from the milk.

Starches are made up of many sugar groups linked together; they are more complex sugars. When digested they break down into the simple sugars again.

The main sources of Carbohydrates are (1) sugars, white or granulated sugars, brown sugar, maple sugar, syrups and candy. (2) Fruits, fresh, preserved or dried. (3) Starches, cornstarch, wheat, corn, barley, rye, rice, oat, all breakfast meals, bread, cakes and pastries. (4) Vegetables, beans, peas, carrots, onions, and many other vegetables.

Only sugars are 100 per cent carbohydrates; most of the grains, vegetables, or fruits rich in starch, contain also protein and minerals. It must be remembered that foods are mixtures of many substances, but for convenience they will be grouped according to their richest constituents.

The carbohydrates in our food after going through the process of digestion are broken down to the simplest sugar, glucose, which in turn is absorbed from the intestines into the blood and through the circulation is carried to different organs and to the muscles to be burned or to be oxidized, in order to supply energy and warmth.

Sugars and starches are not stored in the body as such; only Glycogen, a very complex sugar, is stored in the liver and to some extent in muscles; however, there is always glucose in the circulating blood.

It is generally recommended that three-fifths of our energy, or fuel supply, should come from carbohydrates. The sugars, however, should be used in moderate amounts, because they lack in protein, minerals and vitamins. Too much consumption of sugar in exclusion of other vital food elements is injurious. Sugar is also irritating to the lining of the stomach and intestines when taken too much.

Fat.—As we saw, Carbohydrates are almost entirely of vegetable origin; on the other hand, fats are found mainly in food of animal origin. Animals, unable to store any surplus food in form of carbohydrates like plants and vegetables, transform such surplus food into fat and store in different organs and under the skin for use as fuel in some later emergency. Such deposits of fat not only serve for fuel for emergency, but support and protect the organs and prevent the loss of heat from body surface.

Chief sources of fat are milk, butter, cream, cheese of any kind, meats, bacon, pork, mutton, lamb, beef; poultry, fish, dairy products, vegetable oils, olive, cotton seed, nuts, seeds, legumes, peanut, soybean, pastries, etc. Fat is very concentrated food; it has two and one-fourth times the fuel value of either carbohydrate or protein in equal weight. Fat is very valuable and palatable food, but should be used in very moderate amount. Not more than 15 to 20 per cent of the fuel value of the diet should be taken in the form of fat. When we consume too much fat in our daily food intake, the excess is stored as fat and will increase the body weight, which is not always beneficial to our health. Certain diseases are peculiar to overweight people. Fat taken in excess slows the movements of stomach and intestines, and sooner or later will cause digestive trouble. The body is not able to handle too much fat in diet at once, and products of incomplete oxidation of fat may accumulate in blood and tissues, which are harmful to the constitution.

GILBERT AND SULLIVAN OPERA TO BE PRODUCED

One of the most tuneful of the Gilbert and Sullivan light operas, "Patience," has been selected by the San Mateo County Light Opera Association for its fall production and tentative dates have been set for October 27 and 28 in the auditorium of the Burlingame high school. With a personnnel of some two hundred of the county's finest musicians to choose from the selection of the principals is somewhat difficult.

Try-outs have been held for several weeks and a general rehearsal took place Tuesday evening in Brewer hall, Burlingame. Principals will soon be announced and those who do not make the leads for this production will be reserved for future performances, as the association plans to give at least three a year.

Fred Carlyle, veteran dramatic coach, is directing the show, and the music is under the baton of James C. Fyfe, well-known music leader of the Peninsula. Supporting the cast and chorus will be a large orchestra of experienced players.

City Tax Rate Facing Slash

A slash of two cents in the Burlingame city tax rate for 1933-34 loomed following adoption of the budget by the council at a meeting last Monday night. The tax rate for last year was $1.45 and this year's rate probably will be $1.43, officials said.

Harvey C. Couch, power magnate of Arkansas, took time out to engage in a hog-calling contest in his county, which he won. Asked the secret of his success, he said he used the "s-o-o-e-y" system.

Woodrow Wilson-Vista Grande P. T. A. Meeting

The members of the Woodrow Wilson-Vista Grande Parent-Teachers' Association held their first meeting of the term on Tuesday afternoon, August 15. Mrs. Norma Andersen, the new president, presided. Many interesting plans are being made for the coming months.

There will be an executive board meeting the second Tuesday of each month in the Woodrow Wilson school. Social or cards will follow the business session. All members are invited to attend these meetings.

There will be a P. T. A. sewing circle every fourth Tuesday of the month, in the Woodrow Wilson school. All members are invited to attend and bring any work they have. Sewing will be done and work donated for P. T. A. benefit aid.

On Thursday evening, September 28, there will be a benefit whist held in the City Hall for student aid. The funds from this whist will be to aid students who are in need of clothing and school supplies. Further plans will be announced later.

The first meeting of the Seventeenth District is being held today in the Burlingame high school. Several members and officers of the local Unit are attending. Mrs. Garland, the new district president, has many new plans for the work in the district, as well as new routines for the local Units.

Mrs. Ethel Bolger, the district finance chairman, was a guest at the regular meeting and gave many valuable suggestions for carrying out the program for the new year. All the Units in the district are to make plans for a bundle drive in the near future.

Several teachers attended the meeting Tuesday. The members of the Association are glad for the hearty co-operation and ask that all teachers who can, be sure to attend. New members and visitors are always welcome.

GENERAL PERSHING P. T. A. BEGINS SEASON'S ACTIVITIES

The regular meeting of the General Pershing Parent-Teachers' Association was held at the school on Thursday, August 10. The following new officers and chairmen were present, ready to start work for the new term:

President, Mrs. J. D. Eason; Vice-President, Mrs. R. Welch; Secretary, Mrs. Prescott; Treasurer, Mrs. E. C. Boyle; Financial Secretary, Mrs. Ed. Byrne; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. L. Gimowsky; Auditor, Mrs. B. McCarthy; Historian, Mrs. Davidson; Parliamentarian, Mrs. M. Urton; Membership, Mrs. F. Gaitor; Recreation, Mrs. L. Landini; Pin and Emblem, Mrs. Clifton; Magazine, Mrs. Watson; Hospitality, Mrs. Frazier; Publicity, Mrs. Davidson; Sunshine, Mrs. Parodi.

The main project for this year is to try and have a supervized playground in this district for the children on Saturdays and during vacation time. Mrs. Landini was appointed chairman, and will give a report at the next regular meeting, September 5.

Plans were made to collect discarded clothes for the needy. Anything you have may be left at the school, and will be appreciated.

A hot dog sale will be held at the General Pershing school next Thursday, August 24, at noon. Come and be a kid again and enjoy a hot dog.

On August 31 a whist will be held at the General Pershing school at 2 P. M., Mrs. Boyle and Mrs. Prescott in charge. As it is the first whist of the new term, the members would be happy to have it start in a big way by having many smiling faces present.

Mr. R. L. Crane, superintendent of Jefferson school district, Mrs. Lohr, district school nurse, Mrs. Pape, the new principal, and the teachers of the General Pershing school wished the new President a happy and successful term, and volunteered their help.

Following adjournment of the meeting refreshments were served by Mrs. Frazier and her committee, and all enjoyed a social half hour.

POPULAR YOUNG COUPLE ENTER LIFE PARTNERSHIP

Miss Mary Alice Murray, of this city, was secretly married to Mr. Bart. J. O'Donaghue, of San Francisco, on June 2. The couple were married in the Catholic church, St. Mark's, in Richmond. THIS DISTRICT IS HONORED

New Senior Vice-Commander, Department of California and Nevada.

It is very gratifying to know that at the June encampment of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, held at Las Vegas, Nevada, that this district was signally honored by having had elected to the office of Senior Vice-Commander, Department of California and Nevada, Edward M. Seacord, of San Jose.

Comrade Seacord is well known throughout the realm of Veterandom through his tireless efforts in behalf of the Veteran. He is the Past Commander of San Jose Post, the Five County Inter-County Council, has been chairman of the C. M. T. C committee for the past five years, and held other offices in the Veterans of Foreign Wars too numerous to mention. We know that with Comrade Seacord in the office of Senior Vice-Commander this section will receive more attention and assistance in the next year than it has had in the past two or three combined. We all wish Comrade Seacord nothing but the best of luck, success, and abundant happiness in his new position, and assure him that Old Glory Post will do all that is in its power to assist and help him.

SPLINTERS

From the H. H. Smith Lumber Yard

VOLUME 6 FRIDAY, AUGUST 18, 1933 NUMBER 4

Published in the interests of the People of Daly City and vicinity by H. H. Smith and Employees.

"Sandy must be an electrician. He's out there doing something to the street light."

"Oh, he's attaching a reflector to it to throw the light into his sitting room so he won't have to burn his own lights."

Doctor: "As I said, you've just regained consciousness after the crash. I'm Dr. Peter, and—"

Victim: "Oh, for a second you gave me a shock. I thought you said you were Saint Peter."

Lumber, Coal and Kindling—the best.

It is not because men like to fish so well, but because they are cleaning house at home.

"Willie," said sister's suitor, "do you ever peek through the keyhole when I am calling on your sister?"

"Sometimes," admitted Willie, "but Ma is generally there."

The man who hiked 2,000 miles and couldn't find his uncle should put to shame those husbands who wait home for dinner a few hours while wifey is out playing bridge.

S. O. S.
See Our Stuff.

Tommy: "Father, my Sunday school teacher says if I'm good I will go to heaven."

Father: "Well?"

Tommy: "Well, you said if I were good I'd go to the circus. Now, I want to know who's telling the truth."

"Ezra, tomorrow is our twenty-fifth wedding anniversary. Hadn't we better kill a chicken?"

"Why punish the chicken for something that happened twenty-five years ago?"

Most people are very pleasant as long as you don't try to collect.

"Eliza," said a friend of the family washerwoman, "have you seen Miss Edith's fiance?"
